Also, do not fold any of these manuscripts into ordinary envelopes. Use the big manila envelopes so the manuscripts won't have to be folded.

4. I have now typed up a fourth manuscript, "Three Worthy Artisans". Please send this one to Harper's Weekly. I have typed a covering letter with it, but, again, you'll have to type in the address of Harper's Weekly. Do not submit this anywhere except to Harper's Weekly without consulting me first.

It embarrasses me to send anything to Harper's Weekly. The sample you sent me was so disgustingly degenerate and urbanized. But I want the damned money, so I hope they accept the damn thing. Well, thanks for taking care of this crap for me. I wouldn't dream of carrying on any such correspondence from here, because of course the postman knows everybody and I wouldn't want my neighbors to find out that I a... dabbling in any such nefarious activities. I mean, if I were merely a dope-addict, escaped convict, sex-pervert, or Russian spy, it wouldn't be so bad, but ...

be careful in taking clips on and off the manuscripts, or they'll tear the sheets
